The Equality Act 2010 replaced nine major Acts of parliament and almost one hundred sets of regulations,

The Equality Act 2010 also makes it unlawfu disability, as well as failing to make reasonable adjustments for an individual with a disability. The definition of what constitutes disability discrimination is more complex than that for the other protected characteristics, and is set out in further detail under the section relating to disability equality below.

The Equality Act 2010 makes it unlawful to harass an individual or group of individuals in relation to certain protected characteristics. Harassment is defined as an unwanted act, related to a relevant protected characteristic, which has the purpose or effect of violating that person's dignity or creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for that person. Harassment only applies in relation to the following protected characteristics:

can give a particular group of students preferential treatment (which would be positive discrimination and unlawful), it merely allows the school to put in place measures which redress the balance between those with the protected characteristic and those without. These measures must be a proportionate response to the disadvantage suffered by those with the protected characteristic.

Schools must ensure that a student, parent, visitor or other person coming into contact with the school (or a group of these people) are not treated less favourably than others, than another student or group of students, because of their disability, their parents' disability or the disability of somebody they associate with.

Schools cannot justify directly discriminating against a student or group of students with a disability by maintaining that their discriminatory act was a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim, as was the case under previously disability discrimination legislation.

It is not unlawful for a school to treat a disabled student or group of students more favourably than another student or group of students who are not disabled. This is positive disability discrimination and is lawful.

The Equality Act 2010 makes it unlawful for an individual or group of individuals to be indirectly discriminated against because of their disability, by the implementation of a provision, criterion or practice applied generally to those with or without the disability, unless there is a legitimate reason for the provision, criterion or practice and there is no other way to achieve it.

Schools must ensure that a student or group of students are not put at a disadvantage by the implementation of a school provision, criterion or practice which applies to all students because of their disability, unless they can show that it was implemented for a legitimate reason and was proportionate way of achieving the legitimate aim.

The Equality Act 2010 makes it unlawful for an individual or group of individuals to be discriminated against because of something arising in consequence of their disability, unless there is a legitimate reason for discriminatory act and there is no other way to achieve it, and provided that the discriminator knew, or should have known, about the disability.

Schools must ensure that a student or group of students are not treated less favourably because of something arising in consequence of their disability, unless they can show that there was a legitimate reason for the le

Where a provision, criterion or practice places a disabled student or group of students at a substantial disadvantage compared to students who are not disabled, reasonable steps must be taken to avoid that disadvantage;

Where a disabled student or group of students would, but for the provision of an auxiliary aid, be placed at a substantial disadvantage compared with students who are not disabled, the school must take reasonable steps to provide the auxiliary aid.

An "auxiliary aid" includes equipment and services. The Equality Act 2010 does not provide a definition of "auxiliary aids", however the dictionary definition includes helpful, supporting, assistant things or persons. Where a piece of equipment is necessary for all aspects of a student's life rather than being required in an educational context only (for example, hearing aids), it is likely that it would be considered unreasonable for a school to be expected to provide these.

Factors which a school may consider when considering whether the provision of an auxiliary aid to a disabled student is reasonable include the financial or other resources required, its effectiveness, its affect upon other students and health and safety requirements.

Where a student with Special Educational Needs (SEN) is already being provided with an auxiliary aid as part of their SEN provision, there is no need for the school to provide the auxiliary aid as part of their "reasonable adjustment" duty. Schools should not, however, assume that an auxiliary aid is not required under their "reasonable adjustment" duty for a student with SEN simply because it is not being provided under their SEN provision. In addition, where a school determines that it is unreasonable to provide an auxiliary aid (perhaps, for example, on the grounds of cost), it is not necessarily reasonable for the local authority to refuse to provide the auxiliary aid.

The Equality Act 2010 makes it unlawful for an individual or group of individuals to be disadvantage suffered by students with a protected characteristic, for example by allowing a female student with a skin condition (which may amount to a disability) to wear trousers instead of a skirt, or allowing a Sikh student to wear a turban.

The school's Uniform Policy provides details of the school uniform to be worn by students, tackle prejudice; and promote understanding;

The above duty is often referred to as the General Duty.

The reference to "relevant protected characteristics" includes the protected characteristics of sex, race, disability, religion or belief, sexual orientation, gender reassignment, pregnancy and maternity and age (except that the public sector equality duty does not apply to age where it relates to the provision of education to students in schools, or the provision of benefits, facilities or services to students in schools).

Having "due regard" means giving relevant and proportionate consideration to the public sector equality duty.

DfE guidance on what this means in practice sets out the following:

) decision or taking an action and must assess whether it may have particular implications for people with particular protected characteristics; Schools should consider equality implications before and at the time that they develop policy and take decisions, not as an afterthought, and they need to keep them under review on a continuing basis;

u functions, and the analysis necessary to comply with the duty has to be carried out seriously, rigorously and with an open mind it is not just a question of ticking boxes or following a particular process; Schools cannot delegate responsibility for carrying out the duty to anyone else.

u policies developed, thought must be given to the equality implications. The significance of those implications and the amount of thought that needs to be devoted to them will vary depending on the nature of the decision.

It is good practice for schools to keep a written record to show that they have actively considered their equality duties and asked themselves relevant questions. There is no legal requirement to produce a formal equality impact assessment document, although for key decisions this might be a helpful tool.

If a school does not record its consideration of the general equality duty when making a decision or carrying out a particular function, this does not automatically mean that the duty to demonstrate that the duty has been met if a record has been made at the time. The duty only needs to be implemented in a light-touch way, proportionate to the issue being considered.

Schools have a Specific Duty to:

Improve the delivery to disabled students of information readily accessible to students who are not disabled, within a reasonable time and in ways which are

As a school we know our school population well and analyse data to set targets, identify under performance of specific groups and drive standards.

Parents and families are invited to specific workshops related to discrimination e.g. Anti-Bullying workshops, behaviour workshops.

We encourage all pupils to appreciate their own gender and uniqueness.

We provide pupils with opportunities to listen and discuss a range of opinions and empathise with different experiences.

We promote positive messages about gender through display, assemblies, visitors, whole school events and specific weeks e.g. Black History month.

We have a rolling programme for reviewing all our school policies to ensure they impact on progress, well-

Curriculum planning at Avanti Court reflects a commitment to religious and beliefs equality and there will be opportunities in the curriculum to explore concepts and issues related to religion and beliefs.

Assemblies, PSHE and the PRE Curriculum provide opportunities to explore and celebrate different beliefs and cultures.

We promote of attitudes and values that celebrate and respect diversity and challenge discriminatory behaviour and language wherever it occurs. Materials and resources will promote gender equality.

We ensure that all staff receive appropriate training and opportunities for professional development, both as individuals and as group of teams. Minutes of meetings are kept to show equality issues and actions.

All members of staff through their induction period and through Inset are given guidance on how prejudice-related incidents should be identified, assessed, recorded and dealt with.

We have a school Behaviour and Anti Bullying policy, which is reviewed annually with staff, member of the SSC and pupils.

We deal promptly and effectively with all incidents and complaints of prejudice based bullying relating to gender reassignment. We record incidents and action is taken as and where appropriate.

We keep a record of different prejudice-related incidents and provide a report to the members of the SSC termly on our exclusion data.

Minutes of meetings are kept to show equality issues and actions

The school publishes the following information in compliance with its specific duty to publish information to demonstrate how the school is complying with its public sector equality duty, and publish its equality objectives.

The school will update the information contained in this part at least annually and republish it at least once every four years.

The school understands that it holds a duty to:

DfE guidance states that evidence that the school is aware of the requirements of the Equality Act 2010 and determined to comply with the non-discrimination provisions will be relevant here. This might include copies of any of a range of policies (for example, the school's Anti-Bullying Policy) where the importance of avoiding discrimination and other prohibited conduct is expressly noted. If there has been a meeting of staff or of SSC, during which they are reminded of their responsibilities under the Equality Act 2010, a note of that meeting could also be useful evidence that due regard is being had to this part of the duty. Evidence of staff training on the Equality Act would also be appropriate, as would a note of how the school monitors equality issues.

DfE guidance states that attainment data which shows how students with different protected characteristics are performing will obviously be relevant here, in particular in helping to identify whether there are areas of inequality which may need to be addressed. RAISE online contains much detailed analysis by relevant characteristics. Schools will also need to include information about the steps they have taken in response to their analysis of the available data. This does not need to be complicated, as most of the information will already be contained in easily available documents such as reports to the SSC and the CEO.

For some protected characteristics, for example religion and belief and particularly sexual orientation, statistical data about students is less likely to be available, and it may not be considered appropriate to try to obtain it. More general data about the issues associated with these particular protected characteristics, from which schools should be able to identify possible issues which may affect their own students, will be easily available however.

DfE guidance states that it should be particularly easy for schools to demonstrate that they are fostering good relations, since promoting good relations between groups of students of all kinds is inherent in many things which they do as a matter of course. It may be shown through, for example, aspects of the curriculum which promote tolerance and friendship, or which share understanding of a range of religions or cultures, the Behaviour Policy and AntiBullying Policy, assemblies dealing with relevant issues, involvement with the local communities, twinning arrangements with other schools which enable students to meet and exchange experiences with children from different backgrounds, or initiatives to deal with tensions between different groups of students within the school itself.

opportunity for all.

Objective 1: Ensure that all out of school activities promote that all can participate.

Objective 2: Race Equality Duty: Identify, respond and report racist incidents as outlined in the Plan. Report the figures to the SSC and the CEO on a termly basis.

Objective 3: Celebrate cultural events throughout the year to increase pupil awareness and understanding of different communities e.g. Diwali, Eid, and Christmas.

Objective 4: Build in opportunities to explore practices and celebration of different faiths and cultures.

Objective 1: The school is aware of the access needs of disabled pupils, staff, members of the SSC, parent/carers and visitors.

Objective 2: Layout of school to allow access for all pupils to all areas.

Objective 3: Ensure all staff are aware of disabled children's curriculum access.

Objective 4: Improve signage and external access for visually impaired people.

Objective 1: Ensure staff demonstrate a balance of gender roles in society and challenges stereotyping.

Objective 2: Ensure the school provides equal opportunities in the curriculum for boy/girl participation.

Objective 3: Ensure that all out of school activities promote the ideal that anyone can participate regardless of gender.

Publication of information in future years should include evidence of the steps being taken and progress made towards meeting the equality objectives that the school has already set itself.

The school has prepared and will implement the following accessibility plan to increase the extent to which disabled students can participate in the curriculum, improve the physical environment of the school to increase the extent to which disabled students are able to take advantage of education and benefits, facilities or services provided or offered by the school, and improve the delivery to disabled students of information readily accessible to students who are not disabled, within a reasonable time and in ways which are determined after taking into account the students' disabilities and any preferences expressed by them or their parents.

The school will keep the Accessibility Plan under continual review and revise it as necessary. This is available in the Avanti Schools Trust Policy Handbook.
